The Dark Night

*Soothing, peaceful, dark, quiet
Does not contain no light.*

*In the sky, I see a moon
But not until the noon.*

*Too many stars in my sight
That surely would be the dark night*

Before You Fly

We dream of skies, of flying high,
Yet never ask the earth why.
In chasing more, we lose our ground,
A quiet self no longer found.
The tallest tree still needs the soil,
Not just the sun or endless toil.
Grow, but don't forget your start-
The flight means little without heart.

If Only They Knew

She felt like the happiest one alive ,
Not until another version of her arrived .

She got compared to her days and night ,
Until she gave up on her life and just silently cried .

They said "be like her " with every breath ,
Not knowing those words push her to death .
They compared their child and dim her flame,
She stops living and just plays the game .

Stars and Scars

*The more you look at stars,
the less they seem like scars.
there are some in your heart, but they feel yet so close,
yet so far.
but the questions lingers,
are they stars?
or are they scars?
but then again,
the more you look at stars,
the less they seem like scars.*
